

Pamphlet 10

Year 1, Pamphlet 10

15 June 2026

primordia

about Latin and its culture

For previous iterations, refer to our website at <https://latin2u.github.io>.

Note

This is the last pamphlet of the 2025-26 school year! We'll wrap up the first part of Latin. There will be an emphasis on topics that are not exactly related to the Latin language (grammar, words, charts), like the Roman world, mythology/myths, and Roman life. However, there will be the promised word list, etc. Additionally, looking back at the previous pamphlets, I would like to note that if the 1st declension (I know, that was so far back!) noun has a root that is identical to a 2nd declension noun, then its dative and ablative plural will end in abus, and that some nouns surprisingly have different declensions, like vesper. Most say it is a second declension (vesper, vesperi) noun, but some argue that it's a third declension (vesper, vesperis) noun.

Roman Myths

There are many Roman myths that survive today, but among the most famous are:

- Aeneas, a Trojan hero and son of Venus, fled the burning city of Troy when it fell. He travelled across the Mediterranean to find asylum, eventually landing on the Italian peninsula. His son Iulus founded Alba Longa, a Latin¹ city, and a few centuries later –
- Romulus and Remus were the result of former king Numitor's daughter, Rhea Silvia, and Mars, the war god (who was definitely not her husband!) Numitor was overthrown by his brother Amulius, which forced Rhea Silvia to be a Vestal Virgin, but Mars visited her and they resulted in said two children. Paranoid of a future rebellion against his rule, king Amulius ordered a servant to drown Romulus and Remus in the river Tiber, but the servant didn't want to and just left them there. A she-wolf nurtured them, along with a woodpecker who brought food, until a shepherd Faustulus found the two babies and raised them on their own. Romulus and Remus ended up founding Rome on the seven hills², but the two couldn't decide which hill they wanted to build it on, leading to a dispute where Remus was killed (different versions disagree on who killed Remus). The founding date of the city was declared to be on 21 April 753 BCE.

¹ Doesn't have anything to do with the Romans at that time

² More on that later

- In the early days of Rome, there were many men and not so many women. To fix this, Romulus invited Sabine women to a festival, and the Romans kidnapped the women. The Sabine men were unhappy and were about to fight with the Romans until the women intervened. Peace was made and the Romans and Sabines united.
- Psyche was even more beautiful than Venus, so Venus asked Cupid to shoot a love arrow at a monster to make Psyche fall in love with it. Cupid accidentally pricked himself with the arrow, and he married Psyche on the condition that she cannot look at his face. Unfortunately, Psyche did, and she did impossible tasks (like Hercules!) to gain back Cupid. She finished and went to the heavens as a goddess.
- Many other myths (Pyramus and Thisbe, Narcissus and Echo, the Golden Fleece) were taken from Greek culture.

Two Footnotes from Pamphlet 3

Numbers, Continued

I covered Numbers in Pamphlet No. 1, but I only covered the numerals themselves - the Roman numerals. However, there are ordinal and cardinal numbers. For now, since this is a short section, we will cover cardinal numbers. (Cardinal numbers are like one, two, and three, while ordinal numbers are like first, second, and third.)

- unus, una, unum = one
- duo, duae, duo = two
- tres, tria = three
- quattuor = four
- quinque = five
- sex = six

Footnote One

The numbers one, two, and three were the only ones listed in their full form (masculine, feminine, and neuter) when I wrote this article back in late February. They have special charts for them (so you will not go uni puerīs, not even *unīs puerīs*³).

unus, being one, will only have a singular part, and duo and tres, being multiple (two and three), will only have plural parts.

unus, -a, -um (one)	Masculine	Feminine	Neuter
Nominative sing.	unus	una	unum
Genitive sing.	unius	unius	unius
Dative sing.	uni	uni	uni
Accusative sing.	unum	unam	unum
Ablative sing.	uno	una	uno
Vocative sing.	une	una	unum

³ Matching endings does NOT mean correctness!!! Matching case, number, gender = correctness duo, -ae, -o (two)	Masculine	Feminine	Neuter

Nominative plur.	duo	duae	duo
Genitive plur.	duorum	duarum	duorum
Dative plur.	duobus	duabus	duobus
Accusative plur.	duos	duas	duo
Ablative plur.	duobus	duabus	duobus
Vocative plur.	duo	duae	duo

Note: masculine and neuter are almost identical in duo.

tres, -ia (three)	Masculine/Feminine	Neuter
Nominative plur.	tres	tria
Genitive plur.	trium	trium
Dative plur.	tribus	tribus
Accusative plur.	tres	tria
Ablative plur.	tribus	tribus
Vocative plur.	tres	tria

Footnote Two

I also neglected to write out the forms of numbers 60 to 90:

- 60: sexaginta
- 70: septuaginta
- 80: octoginta
- 90: nonaginta

(Remember that for the tens, "ginta" is mostly used.)

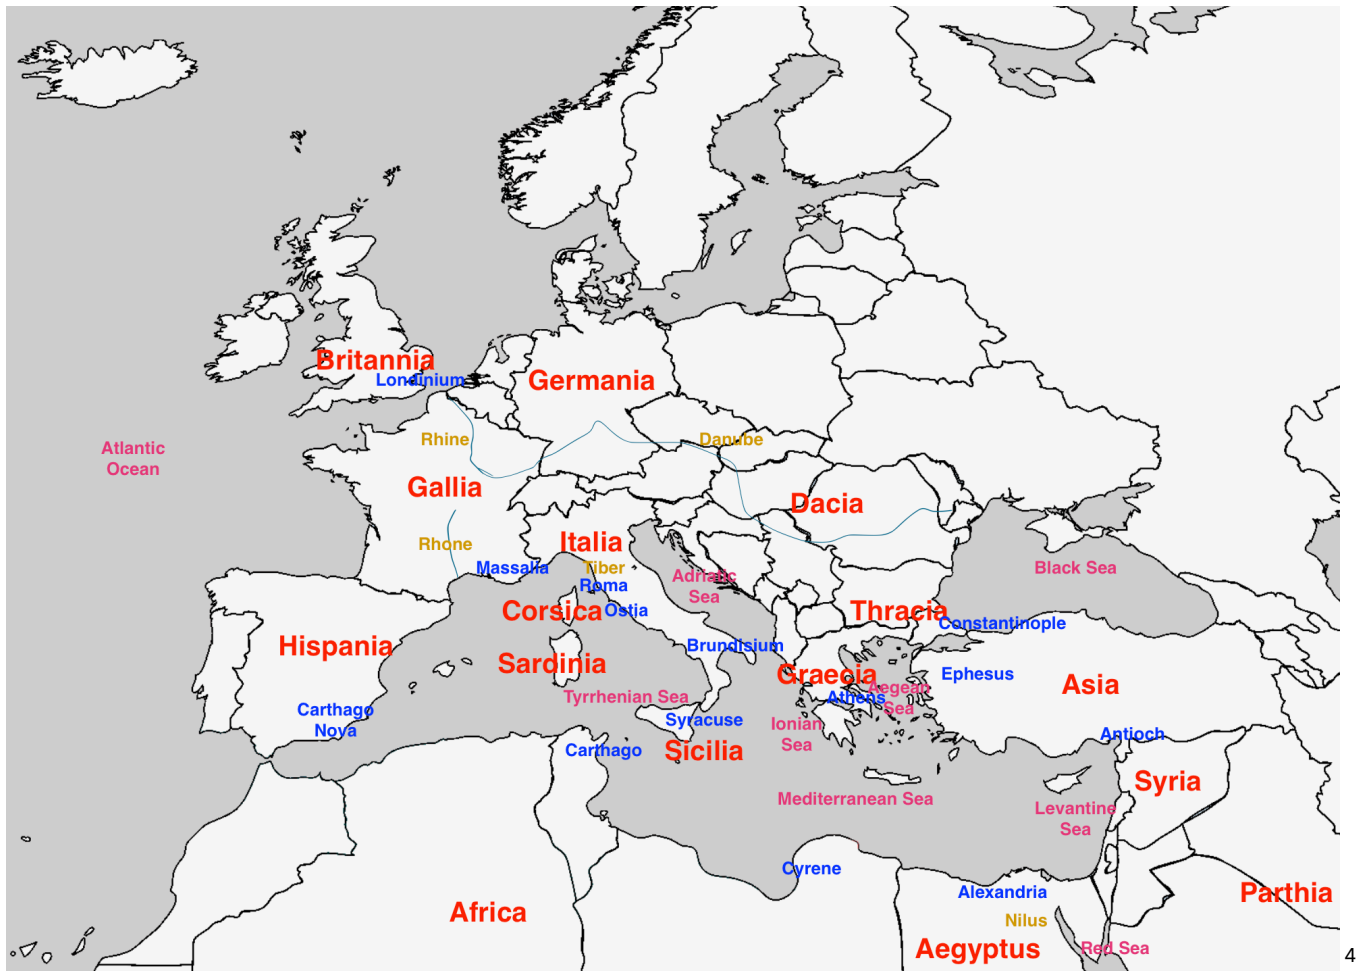

Additionally, I completely forgot to cover 200 to 900:

- 200: ducenti
- 300: trecenti
- 400: quadringenti
- 500: quingenti

- 600: sescenti
- 700: septingenti
- 800: octingenti
- 900: nongenti

(Remember for the hundreds, "genti" is mostly used.)

The Roman World

There's a slight typo at "Thrac[i]e", meaning "Thrace". Otherwise, everything's fine!!!

Word List 5

ruber, rubra, rubrum	red
fuscus, fusca, fuscum	brown
flavus, flava, flavum	Yellow

⁴ map-of-europe-and-asia-printable.pdf is where I got the blank map, and I added the labels myself.

viridis, viride	green
prasinus, prasina, prasinum	leek-green
caeruleus, caerulea, caeruleum	blue purpureus, purpurea, purpureum	purple
albus, alba, album	white
niger, nigra, nigrum ater, atra, atrum	Black (glossy) (matte dark)
canus, cana, canum	Grey, hoary

Word List 5b

navis, navis	3rd f.	ship
nauta, nautae	1st m.	sailor
unda, undae	1st f.	wave
aqua, aquae	1st f.	water
biremis, biremis	3rd f.	Bireme (two-oared ship)
triremis, triremis	3rd f.	Trireme (three-oared ship)
velum, veli	2nd n.	sail
malus, mali	2nd m.	mast ⁵
gubernator, gubernatoris	3rd m.	captain
remus, remi	2nd m.	oar
carina, carinae	1st f.	keel
funis, funis	3rd m.	rope
prora, prorae	1st f.	proW
thalamus, thalami	2nd m.	The lowest deck of the galley

⁵ NOT APPLE!!! That's malum, mali