I’m starting to add graphics to this pamphlet to give it a more appealing look. (However, it’s safe to say that I’m now focusing more on the contents.) Additionally, I updated the Google Form for feedback, now at https://forms.gle/wESJ2FcXixpWuE9m7. (Assuming that you’re on a PDF viewer, you can click the link above.)

More Functions

I covered the following functions last time: nominative of subject, genitive of possession, genitive of partitive, genitive of value, dative of indirect object, dative of reference, dative of impersonal construction, accusative of direct object, accusative of time, double accusative, ablative of instrument, and ablative of agent. This time, I'll cover a few more.

1. Ablative Place from Which
   a. ab Romā venimus
      "we come from Rome"
   b. Denotes an action away from something
2. Accusative Place to Which
   a. Galliam eunt
      "they go to Gaul"
   b. Denotes an action to something
3. Locative Place Where
   a. Romae estis
      "you (all) come in Rome"
   b. Denotes the name of a small city, island, or town, and other exceptions (domus, rus, humus, etc.)

4. Ablative Place Where
    a. in urbe sunt
       "they are in the city"
    b. Denotes everything else not covered by the locative.
5. Ablative of Comparison
    a. melior fratre sum!
       "I am better than [my] brother"
6. Ablative of Means
    a. Another term for ablative of instrument
7. Ablative of Absolute
    a. hostibus victīs, discesserunt
       "with the enemies having been defeated, they left"
    b. Noun and participle in the ablative
    c. Denotes another clause in the sentence
8. Vocative of Direct Address
    a. amice, veni!
       "friend, come!"
    b. Used to address someone directly.
9. Accusative of Indirect Address
    a. O immortales deos…
       "O[h] immortal gods…"
    b. Used to address someone or something not with or near the speaker.
10. Dative of Possession
    a. mihi malum est
       "I have an apple"
       Literally "an apple is to me"
    b. sum and a dative used
11. Ablative of Object of the Preposition
    a. ex hortõ venis
       "You come from the garden."
    b. Used where a preposition requires its object to be in the ablative case
12. Accusative of Object of the Preposition
    a. post mortem
       "after death"
    b. Used where a preposition requires its object to be in the ablative case.

Note: for both #11 and #12, refer to word list 3b in pamphlet 6 for some prepositions and their cases.

13. Ablative of Accompaniment
    a. cum puerïs
       "with the boys"
    b. Used to show accompaniment with someone else

May Holidays

1 May - Birthday of Mars, the god of war
1 May - Matronalia for the goddess of childbirth
14 May - the second Equirria
15 May - Feriae Iovi (for Jove)
17 May - Liberalia (where young boys became men, with the removal of the bulla, a lucky charm)
25 May - Hilaria

Exercise 4

1. What is the ablative singular of the following nouns:
    a. felis, felis: _____
    b. apis, apis: _____
    c. equus, equi: _____
    d. phoca, phocae: _____
    e. leo, leonis: _____
2. Match the correct form of the singular noun to the preposition given. Then translate it. The first one has already been done for you.
    a. (Example): super (leo, leonis) => super leonem (because super requires an accusative object of the preposition) (above the lion)
    b. ultra (montis, montis) _____
    c. sine (causa, causae; "cause") _____
    d. ad (Roma, Romae) _____
    e. sub (mensa, mensae) _____
    f. inter (villa, villae; "villa") _____
3. When did Parentalia, a holiday which honored deceased relatives, take place (month)? _____
4. If the feminine ablative singular of a certain pronoun is qua, then what is the neuter accusative singular of the same pronoun? _____
5. As a cardinal number in Latin (not Roman numerals), what is the value of 3 + 6 + 9 + 11? _____
6. What is the answer to #5 as a Roman numeral (the one with the letters like I, V, X, L, …) _____
